Lady Owls learn a valuable lesson

By Joe Wyman
Sports Writer

The Lady Owls learned a valuable lesson in last Saturday's basketball game against Southern Connecticut State University. The Lady Owls started out slow, shooting a cold 19 percent for the first half against the best defensive team in the league.

Head Coach Keith Boucher described the first half as being "a coach's nightmare." The usually hot-shooting Owls displayed none of their trademark sharpshooting from three-point land nor from anywhere else on the floor.

"It was quite obvious that their defense was better than our offense in the first half," explained Coach Boucher. "But we were not being patient in looking for our shots."

Every team is going to have an "off" night once in a while, but Coach Boucher felt that with the talent his team has, they should be able to overcome the stretches when the shots are not falling. "We were in a coma," Boucher said. "Our biggest obstacle was our lack of intensity."

After being down 23-17 at the half, a completely different team stepped onto the floor for the second half. The Lady Owls displayed what the KSC fans are accustomed to, fast paced, exciting basketball. They worked the ball inside which led to the Owls getting to the free throw line 25 times. "We came out in the second half and we played great," Boucher said. "We had better shot selection, we worked it inside, and we went to the line."

The Lady Owls also picked up their defensive intensity, forcing Southern to shoot only 19 percent for the second half. Boucher credits his seniors for the increased intensity.

"Michelle Zeigler was tough the entire game," Boucher said. "She was very intense and just played great." Zeigler finished the game with 20 points, including 12 for 16 shooting from the free throw line, and had ten rebounds.

With the second half turn-around, the Lady Owls defeated Southern 57-43. Their NECC record now stands at 3-1. Their loss came last Wednesday at the hands of New Hampshire College, 74-65.

Coach Boucher is looking to push his team to work harder and to increase intensity. With that, he feels the team will be better prepared for the upcoming league games which are all big ones. Boucher stated, "Every game is going to be a big game. Everybody wants to knock us off. Hopefully we've had our wake-up call and learned from it."

The Lady Owls next game will be tonight when they face a hard-working, scrappy Franklin Pierce College squad.

Men's basketball earns win over Southern

From Equinox
Staff Reports

With six seconds left to play, Southern Connecticut's Rich Radicioni caught an airball and converted his own desperation shot into the last points of Saturday's contest against the KSC Owls.

Unfortunately for Southern Connecticut, Keene edged out the victory 74-68 to even their conference record at 2-2.

Freshman guard Derrick Aiken netted 18 points followed by sophomore Steve Pollard with 17 points and seven rebounds. Sophomore point guard Brian Nash led KSC with eight assists. Rich Radicioni led Southern with 20 points, while a pair of freshmen, Pat Good and Jim Rourke, had 19 and 18 points respectively.

Rourke was especially deadly, hitting nine of 10 shots from the floor and scoring the games first two points. But Aiken hit a three-pointer that gave KSC the lead they would never relinquish. Southern's head coach Art Leary used both a 1-3-1 zone and a man-to-man defense to keep his team close.

The latter was exploited by Nash who completed a rare four-point play, fouled after hitting a three, this gave KSC the lead 23-17.

Keene was then held to a point in the last three minutes of the sluggish first half and the score was a lowly 24-23 at intermission.

Luckily, the second half picked up with twice as much scoring. It took KSC just two possessions and less than a minute to force Leary into a time-out and out of a 1-3-1 defense. KSC attacked the heart of the zone with a pass to the foul line and then rammed the ball down low where junior forward John Koester drew a foul and senior center Frank Dolan hit a lay-up.

Rourke opened the scoring for Southern, but Nash and Pollard stretched Keene's lead to nine points.

With only six minutes remaining, Southern cut the lead to four points, 53-49. Fortunately for KSC, freshman Nelson Peterson came alive to create Keene's biggest lead, 64-51. Southern came back for one more stretch, but Southern came back for one more stretch, but Keene held on to take the six point victory.

The Owls will take the court again tonight when they travel to Franklin Pierce College in Rindge, N.H. to meet their area rivals.

On Saturday, the locals will travel to Connecticut to meet the University of Bridgeport Purple Knights.

Recreational sports get underway for the 1990s

By Kristi Severson
Staff Writer

The 1990 spring semester for recreational sports has some new additions to its regular schedule. Co-ed recreational soccer and co-ed softball tournaments are being offered in late March and mid-April, pending the condition of the fields. A bowling tournament is also planned for this semester.

Recreational basketball will open the season Thursday, Feb. 1, at 7:30 p.m. All games will be played Monday through Thursday from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m., and Sunday from 12:00 to 4:00 p.m.

Men's basketball leagues I and II will play on Monday. Co-ed recreational volleyball is scheduled for Tuesday. Just-for-fun basketball, a non-competitive activity, is on Wednesday and Sunday. Thursday will be split between the men's basketball league III and the women's basketball league. The women will play directly after the men, at 9:30. These times are subject to change in accordance with the varsity sports schedules. Each player is advised to check the schedules posted at the Recreational Sports Office, in the Spaulding Gymnasium for the specific playing times.

Everyone is encouraged to participate in recreational sports. According to Recreational Sports Director, Hazel Varner, experience is not a requirement.

Lombardo accepts post at university

By Scott McPherson
Features Editor

Director of Admissions Dave Lombardo has been chosen to build a women's soccer program at James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Va.—a task he accomplished at Keene State 10 years ago.

File photo

A national search for his replacement has started, Lombardo said. He said he hopes a successor will be named before he leaves Keene State for JMU on June 29.

Lombardo coached the Lady Owls for 10 years, and oversaw their transition from a club sport to one of the premier NCAA Division II programs in the nation.

"I believe this is one of the reasons that I was selected," Lombardo said yesterday. "I'm very excited from the standpoint that the university has made a commitment to the success of this program."

His seven-year varsity record is an impressive 78-35-8. His team appeared in seven tournaments and two ECAC Division II championships. Lombardo was also honored when he was named National Soccer Coaches Association of America National Coach of the Year in 1987.

Lombardo retired from coaching two years ago to direct his full attention to admissions work. During those two years, Lombardo said, he did not lose his interest in soccer.

"I've always had a very strong interest in soccer," Lombardo said. "This was such a wonderful opportunity."

Lombardo coached and worked in admissions for 10 years. He has worked solely in admissions for two years and now he said, he is ready to tackle full time coaching.

"Now I'm ready to find out find out what full-time coaching is like," Lombardo said. "I feel good about the things I've done here."

"In every decision there are a matrix of variables," Lombardo said. "In this decision, nine-and-a-half of the 10 variables were there."

Lombardo said several variables that affected his decision were JMU's 11,000 students, it is a Division I school, the university's mid-atlantic location and his ability to pursue a graduate degree, something he wasn't able to do here.

Lombardo said athletes in Virginia are aware of JMU's commitment to creating a quality woman's soccer program. This, he said, along with Virginia's strong high school soccer program, will help him start the team.

"I think it will be a couple of years before we're competitive," Lombardo said.

Janet Lucas, the associate athletic director at James Madison said she was pleased that Lombardo was joining her staff.

"He has proven success with women's soccer," Lucas said in a phone interview last night. "And he has a proven background as someone who can build a successful program."

Sturnick: There is no money

By Jennifer Thamel
Staff Writer

The mid-semester tuition increases for all in-state students, as addressed by Keene State President Judith Sturnick, was the main topic at last night's Student Assembly meeting in Waltz Lecture Hall.

The New Hampshire Legislature has said every state agency, and every state funded organization, will be looked at for a 10 percent cut, said Sturnick to approximately 70 Keene State students last night.

Revenue shortfalls have forced the state to take back money that had previously been appropriated to state agencies. "There is no money in the state," Sturnick said.

The House has forwarded to the Senate a bill that proposes a 7.5 percent budget cut. If this bill is passed, the University System Board of Trustees will vote on Feb. 15 to increase tuition by $150 for in-state students. The $150 increase must be paid by students this semester and next fall.

Unlike last year's student rallies with the "Save Our School" White-Out project, Sturnick said such actions this year may hurt the proposed bill.

Sturnick said the legislators remember those actions and, therefore, do not wish to have those actions repeated with regard to this year's budget.

Because the same lawmakers are in office now, that were in office at the time of the budget battle last year, they do not want a repeat performance from the university system.

"Any action which offends the legislature will withdraw support for that 7.5 percent," Sturnick said.

Budgets of all state-funded agencies are being cut by 10 percent, while the USNH budget is only being cut by 7.5 percent. President Sturnick said that this is a "fragile balance."

Sturnick told the audience that they, as New Hampshire citizens, have the right to protest, but advised against it.

"Our friends have told us that there would be an extremely negative reaction if we go forward with a massive political demonstration," Sturnick said. "I'm not saying you can not fight."

Student Body President, Erik Oparowski expressed concern that doing nothing about this year's budget cut may hurt students when next year's round of budget cuts start.

"To me, it would seem when the cuts come back next year...they will look and see who made the least trouble for them," Oparowski said. "Then we're going to be first on the list to get cut again next semester."

Sturnick stressed, however that the USNH Administration—including the three college presidents and the chancellor—is participating in the budget process.

"Remember that a lot of what's going on now in the legislature, is a series of compromises which, is being worked out behind closed doors," Sturnick said.

"That is the way in which they are Budget to page 6

Ten-year accreditation of Keene State underway

By Jeffrey M. Chadburn
Executive Editor

Keene State College is currently facing several dilemmas. Budget problems, lack of housing and a parking shortage have dominated campus conversation.

Despite these concerns, the day-to-day operation of the college must continue. Part of that operation is the periodic reaccreditation that all schools must go through. This year Keene State is due for its 10-year reaccreditation.

To prepare the campus community for this process President Judith Sturnick and other administrators organized a workshop that was held last September. This workshop, according to the letters mailed to participants, was to acquaint the college with the accreditation process and to have input into the various stages of the accreditation.

The New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) is the agency that accredits Keene State and other schools in New England. According to the NEASC, accreditation serves as a type of quality control for higher education. In order for an institution to be accredited it must "meet or exceed stated criteria of educational quality."

The process involved is a lengthy one. The first part of the process is composing a self-study. This docu-

'On Four' bring their music to Keene State

By Scott McPherson
Features Editor

When the band "On-Four" takes the stage at the Student Union Coffee Shop tomorrow, they will be playing their music.

And their music, they hope, is what will carry them to bigger and better performances.

But they know, even if they never have a Top-40 song, or if they never "pal-it-up" with the best in the business, they still have their music.

Shawn Allen, Tom Rousseau, Chris Child and John Woodward

have been making music together for just about a year. None of them are really sure when they formed.

"Three of us say it was in December and one of us says it was January," said Allen, who is the lead vocalist and guitarist.

Allen and Rousseau were together in another band and were looking for something else. They knew Child and Woodward, and decided to give "On-Four" a try.

Although the band is still in its early stages, its pace has not been slow. They have played regular gigs at Temple Mountain and at local dances. Last summer they traveled to the University of Maine at Farmington for a concert as well as competing in three New Hampshire "Battle of the Bands" and the state-wide "Rock Wars."

It was at the Salem Rock Wars that the group found their name and really began to come together.

"We were all trying to think of a name," Rousseau said. "And that came up when we were playing in the Salem Rock Wars and we didn't have a name...It's been with us since." Rousseau plays bass guitar and also sings.

Woodward said the name is appropriate because they were the fourth band and they played at 4 p.m.

Although they didn't win the "Rock Wars," the band members learned something about themselves.

"We didn't win, but we had a good crowd response," Allen said. "We love playing for an audience."

The band members are working hard to make a name for themselves.

Allen and Rousseau returned from Boston last week, after talking to a record company executive about what it takes to make it big.

They gave a demo tape to the executive, which was an accomplishment itself, Rousseau said.

"I told him I quit my $700 a week job to come down here," Rousseau said with a laugh. It worked.

"He gave us some good ideas," Allen said. The first of those ideas is finding a manager.

"We don't want to have to worry about when and where we'll be playing," Woodward said. "We just want to play."

While "On-Four" claim to have their own style, they admit they have been influenced by a wide range of musicians. These influences affect the music that they write themselves.

"Everybody influences us," Child said.

From Rush, U2 and R.E.M. to The Who, The Beatles and Elvis Presley the band listens and learns from the best.

"We're influenced by a wide range (of groups), that allows us to produce a unique sound," Woodward said. Woodward is the band's drummer.

Rousseau said listening to each others ideas, based on their individual musical tastes, "makes us more open minded."

"Eventually it all meshes together to sound like 'On-Four'," Rousseau said.

The band won the KSC Holiday Cabaret Talent Show in December which makes tomorrows show special.

"We want to go in there and after we leave, we want to them to say, 'hey, who were they?'" Rousseau said. "We want them to remember us."

At least one member of the band admits he is looking at this show as a stepping stone.

"I would like this to be the base for something bigger," the lead guitarist Child said.

That "something bigger" could be opening for major name bands or headlining Club Casino on Hampton Beach or at the Channel in Boston.

Allen said "On-Four's" music has something for everyone. It may sound like a cliché, but its true.

"Our music is written in a way where you can relate your own experiences to them," Allen said. "If people listen to our lyrics, they'll realize they're for them."

"We want to promote our own music," Allen said. "We're not preaching, but we believe our music can do it."

"It's got a sound to it."

Arts Center spring season previewed

By Scott McPherson
Features Editor

For 10 years, the Arts Center on Brickyard Pond has been the center of arts in Cheshire County. From the classics to the contemporary, the performances have entertained their audiences.

The new year is well underway and so is another season at Brickyard Pond. The spring 1990 semester will bring a Broadway show to the Main Theatre and mark the return of Keene State's artists-in-residence, the Apple Hill Chamber Players.

On Feb. 3, choreographer Lar Lubovitch brings his dance company to the Main Theatre of the Arts Center. Lubovitch's company was recognized in 1986 as "Dance Company of the Year" by New York's two daily newspapers. Lubovitch has also choreographed the gold medal performances of figure skaters Peggy Fleming and Dorothy Hamill.

From the exquisite dance of Lar Lubovitch to the humorous Forbidden Broadway, the Main Theatre will change appearances in February. On the 23rd, the satirical Forbidden Broadway will take the stage.

America certainly has a love affair with Broadway musicals, and Forbidden Broadway takes a unique look at them. From Annie to the Phantom of the Opera, Broadway will never look the same.

A seven-time Tony Award winner, Big River: The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn comes to Keene State on March 27. Time magazine called Big River "a classic American musical." It's the stage version of Mark Twain's classic.

Away from the Main Theater and into the Recital Hall, the Arts Center brings you the Turtle Island String Quartet. If jazz, bebop or bluegrass are for you, then March 29 should be circled on your calendar.

For 16 years, Alta Lu Townes has been bringing some of KSC's best dancers to stage in An Evening of the Dance. Keene State students, faculty and alumni will take the stage and showcase their talents on April 19, 20, and 21st. An Evening of the

Endowment fund dedicated in honor of Gendron

By Karen Dacey
Assistant News Editor

The Keene State College Parents Association has dedicated the KSCPA Scholarship Endowment Fund in honor of Associate Dean of Academic Affairs Ernest O. Gendron, according to William Hoffman, president of the KSCPA.

"Gendron not only endorsed the scholarship fund...when he left (the KSCPA last October) it was an unanimous feeling of all in the association to name it in his honor," Hoffman said. "Gendron is someone who has selflessly given in a cause as just as this, as well as representing and generally liking the students." Gendron conceived the idea of a parents association and served as its college liaison.

In an previous statement, Gendron said, "I am overwhelmed to be recognized by the association in this manner. It has been particularly important to me and to the college that the association was able to establish a scholarship fund that gave Keene

Recycling progresses on campus

By Michael McShane
Staff Writer

In 1987, a campus organization called Recycling On the Campus of Keene State, more widely known as ROCKS, was formed by Keene State students concerned about the amount of waste in U.S. landfills.

In earlier years and now again in 1990, the purpose of ROCKS has been to get the Keene State community to actively participate in recycling efforts both on and off campus. One such effort is ROCKS' attempt to reduce the amount of waste sent to United States landfills each year.

According to the 1989 Statistical Abstracts of the United States, the United States generated 157.7 million tons of solid waste in 1986. Approximately 16.9 million tons of this solid waste was recycled and 9.6 million tons was used for energy.

Of the waste accounted for and recycled 23 percent was paper, 25 percent was aluminum, 8.5 percent was glass and one percent was plastic.

In contrast to the amount of solid waste produced, however, is the number of landfills available to hold it. According to Collier's Encyclopedia, in 1980 only 11,730 active landfills were in existence to hold this waste.

Statistics such as these prompted Caserta and ROCKS to re-emerge on the recycling scene at Keene State.

Although ROCKS had a very shaky start in 1987, the organization has flourished since the mandatory recycling mandate took effect. According to an article in the Keene Sentinel, lack of membership, bad publicity, and lack of interest all contributed to the downfall of ROCKS in its early years.

Equinox/Dick Brandt

Last fall was the turning point in the history of recycling at Keene State and the efforts of ROCKS. On Oct. 1, the city of Keene mandated that all residents, businesses, and members of the college recycle their trash or be fined for not obeying the ordinance. Keene residents were instructed to recycle their trash by separating it into newspapers, glass bottles and jars, aluminum cans, and "true trash" (trash that can not be recycled).

It was at this point that senior biology major Jacqueline Caserta decided it was time to revitalize ROCKS. Although she faced several obstacles including a "battle" with the college administration because of past failures of the organization, Caserta used those battles to gain even more enthusiasm and determination.

Although Caserta did much to aid the recycling cause, she knew she could not do as much alone, so she recruited students to help her in the cause. Matt Harris and Brian Deneau are just two of many students participating in the recycling program at Keene State.

Students were not the only ones to aid Caserta's in her "fight against trash." The Concerned Students Coalition and college maintenance became involved as well. According to a story in the Keene Sentinel, the efforts of these organizations and people have helped reduce the amount of trash KSC sends to the dump by one-third. These efforts have surpassed those of the city, which only recycles 10 percent of its waste.

Caserta said in addition to glass, newspapers, and aluminum cans,

State College students actual financial assistance. To have that fund dedicated to me is an honor I will cherish."

The fund was established in 1988 "in response to a need, that was visible both to the college and the parents association, for an endowment fund...in an effort to aid any needy student," Hoffman said.

Larry Colby, director of alumni and parent relations, said the endowment fund must have at least $10,000 before any scholarships can be awarded. He said the association hopes to reach this goal in two years.

The $10,000 will remain in the endowment fund and the scholarship will be comprised of interest collected from this fund. For example, if the interest rate were six percent in the first year, there would be $600 to award in the form of a scholarship.

Money for the fund is raised through KSCPA membership dues and fundraisers such as Examprin, a snack package purchased by parents and sent to students during the week of final exams, Colby said.

University of New Hampshire

UNH Executive Vice-President George Kinnear has been named interim president by a unanimous vote of the University System Board of Trustees, according to The New Hampshire. Kinnear will assume the responsibilities of UNH president on Feb. 19. He will hold this position until a permanent successor is found to replace departing President Gordon Haaland. USNH Trustee Buck Buchanan said, "(Kinnear) is a man of unusual character, ability and strength."

In a recent report by The New Hampshire it says that in an effort to prevent a measles epidemic at the university, Health Services required every student to be vaccinated before registering for spring classes. Barbara Cavanaugh, of Health Services, said they vaccinated 875 students Monday and Tuesday and 765 additional students brought documentation from their doctors saying they had been immunized.

Dartmouth College

According to The Dartmouth, Hanover police arrested Mil Lawler, 19, of Roxbury, Mass. early Sunday morning. Lawler allegedly entered the rooms of several women on the fourth floor of Lord Hall. He was charged with unlawful possession of alcohol and criminal trespass, according to Hanover Police Officer Douglas Dutile. Lawler, who was released on bail, will be arraigned in March and is banned from the Dartmouth campus.

Malls or parking?

Scrap the malls; why not build a parking facility?

Keene has an average population of approximately 25,000 people, including Keene State students. So, how many malls (or mills in this case) does it need?

Keene has the Colony Mill Market Place and the Keene Mill Outlet, which are separated by a piece of land that measures 12 feet.

In addition, there is the West Street Shopping Center and, directly across from it, the Fairbanks Plaza. This is convenient, but also a waste of space, since both plazas contain roughly the same businesses.

Just when Keene appeared safe from mall-mania, the Konover Corporation is in the news again, only this time they are interested in commercial property in rural towns surrounding Keene. These towns—Chesterfield, Marlboro, Swanzey, etc.—have an average population of 5,000 people each, and that is a liberal estimate. Keene residents, and the college populace, wouldn't be able to readily benefit from this anyway, because the time spent driving would perhaps take away from the pleasures of leisurely shopping. Then there's the issue of gas, which is becoming more and more expensive with every oil spill.

Instead of building more malls, Keene should first consider building a decent parking facility that could be shared by the residents and college. A parking garage would alleviate the parking congestion on upper Main Street and the streets that pour onto it.

A parking garage could be placed between the downtown area—benefiting merchants, business people, and shoppers—and the campus. Perhaps there could be a shuttle that would run through the college, and back downtown, with a loop at the Mills.

By now, the Keene city government should have collected enough revenue from all the parking tickets issued these past years to pay for the cost of a parking facility, as is suggested on the backs of the tickets.

The point is, trying to find a "good" parking spot anywhere in Keene is ridiculous after 10 a.m. If there are any doubts about this fact, just drive down Gilbo Avenue, off Main Street; the cars are strewn about like discarded aluminum cans.

Keene is a growing city, just as Keene State is a growing college. Every year more students enroll. Many of these students will bring automobiles, thus increasing the traffic, and the parking problem.

So, Keene, put the mall on hold and figure out how to solve the parking dilemma. The more parking space there is, the more people can visit and shop. Then, hoist the malls.

Recycling...it's everyone's duty

It was as if it were any old trash. It didn't matter that landfills were filling at an alarming rate. Never mind that it was the law. Never mind he had walked by the recycling bins in his Owls Nest to get to the dumpster.

This Keene State College student just dropped his case of empty beer bottles in the trash.

Clang. There goes another cubic foot of landfill, because this person was lazy.

Since recycling made its appearance on the campus of Keene State, everyone has been affected. From the faculty to the physical plant staff and everyone in between, we've been forced to change our habits.

But this student didn't care. In one semester of mandatory recycling at Keene State, the college has collected and sold more than 90,000 aluminum cans. That is a lot of soda and beer.

But this guy just wanted to get the trash out of his room.

More than $1,200 has been collected from recycling various materials on campus. More than 200 cubic yards of material have been recycled. This 200 cubic yards of landfill saved by a small New Hampshire college might just be used for bigger and better things when combined with 200 more cubic yards that could be saved if everyone on campus recycled.

There wasn't even any true garbage with the students' trash, just a case of bottles.

We've all experienced recycling. After a party in our rooms, or after collecting a weeks' worth of newspapers, we wonder what to do. Well, it's simple.

Be aware. When you're finished with something that can be recycled, deposit it somewhere. Anywhere but the trash. There are recycling bins located in every building on campus.

You don't have to trudge across campus or, in most cases, even outside. They're usually just down the hall from your room or office.

Keep your true trash separate from your recyclables and life will be a lot easier.

If your friends or co-workers are not recycling, get them to. Give them the facts they need to know about recycling.

There are many people on campus dedicated to the recycling effort. But everyone must contribute to make their efforts worthwhile. A lot of money has been spent to make recycling easier. But a lot of money is being saved as well.

As someone who, at times, has been lazy and just dumped my cans, bottles, and newspapers in the trash, I'm making a new effort.

When I see the dedication of these people I feel guilty. Guilty for my laziness.

The time spent by the student workers is as valuable as yours or mine, but they still find the time. The least we can do is help.

A full page ad was purchased in The Equinox to show the facts about recycling. Glance at it and you'll be amazed. In one short semester we've accomplished a lot.

If you are at all honest with yourself and recycle, we can accomplish even more.

Clang. There goes another cubic foot of our planet Earth.

Is Keene State worth $10,000 a year?

Ten thousand dollars. That is how much I pay to come to Keene State College every year. That's a brand new car, every year. A down payment on a house, every year. A trip around the world, every year. The point is, that's a lot of money. However, I'm not trying to complain about the price of our wonderful education system, but to ask the question, "do you really get what you pay for?"

I was brought up believing this notion was true—until I came here. I came to a state school to save my parent's money. Now, three years later, I'm paying the tuition of a private college. It seems to me that for ten thousand dollars a year, I should be paying for someone to make my life easier, but that doesn't seem to be the case. When I think of what the ten thousand dollars is buying me, this is what I've come up with:

- not knowing where I'm living until one week before I come to school.
- not having a schedule when I do come back to school.
- not having my phone calls returned by the registrar.
- being talked to in a rude, harsh, condescending voice when I do get in touch with the registrar.
- paying for overpriced books in the bookstore.
- being treated rudely by a saleswoman in the bookstore when I ask a simple question.
- being called a liar by one of the lunch ladies. (According to her and her valentine machine, I had already eaten lunch. When I tried to explain that I hadn't, she told me to leave in an abrupt and rude manner.)

I'm sorry, but at about this time I had had it with Keene State. I couldn't be nice anymore. I let out all of my aggravation on that poor lunch lady. I could not stand by and be treated as an inconvenience. If there is one thing that I know that I pay ten thousand dollars for, it is to be treated like an adult human being who has feelings—not just a number with legs.

Residential Life told me that I was "lucky" to be told a whole week in advance where I was living. I have also been told by fellow students that I am lucky that I have a schedule (even if I did get it the day school started). These students have had to add/drop entire schedules. If you are one of these students, then you are getting an even rarer deal than I am.

If I am "lucky" to have housing and classes, than what am I paying ten thousand dollars for? I thought paying that amount of money was to ensure that I had these "luxuries" taken care of and in the process, to be treated like a human being.

I've never said anything until now. In fact, this letter has been composed of three years of tension and three years of wondering where my money goes: the money that I make over the summer, the money that I make over breaks, and of course the money that my parents have poured into this college over the past three years.

I realize that it is easy to point out bad things about something, to "point the finger," but I would not have pointed the finger at Keene State if I did not think it would do some good. I just want to bring to the attention of the administration that we students pay a lot of money to come here. Would it kill you to be a little nicer?

My major is elementary education, the program and the classes offered here for that major are, in my opinion, the best in New England. However in the process of trying to get the best education I can, I have had to put up with rudeness, sarcasm, and undue aggravation. Come on, Keene State, can't you be a little nicer? A little more personal? Maybe even help people with a smile? Or do those things cost extra too?

Citizens liable for U.S.'s actions

In response to your "nice" editorial about the trends of freedom, I would like to point out how the U.S. invasion of Panama signifies another example of our government's ability to see U.S. interests before the interests of human life. Life is as sacred as nature and thought, not something for Americans to buy with credit. Was George Bush serious when he said that the loss of life in Panama was worth the goal of bringing General Manuel Noriega to America? What's frightening is that I know he was serious.

The people of the world are speaking out for reform, for civil rights, human rights, and democracy. If Americans are crying out for peace with the world, then why do we send so much economic aid to Israel when they turn on the Arab civilians and murder them in the streets? Why do we spend so much money on the El Salvadoran government, and the Contra rebels when they murder innocent priests, nuns, children, humans?

I have never claimed to take responsibility for the way that the American government is spending our money. But, I was wrong. Each person is accountable for the actions the United States takes, and we are all capable of using our voice to change those policies we disagree with. How can we change?

First of all, we must be aware of how our tax dollars are being spent, and we must also be aware of the ways in which our government uses its coercive power in obtaining its needs (whatever they might be).

Secondly, each individual must take a stance for what she/he believes in. If peace in Central America is important to you, and you think it might be important to the people living there, tell the representatives of your state that they need to vote against aid to these countries. Tell the authorities of our government, that is, the one's who have the right to rule, not the same as an expert in a particular field, that you are no longer going to accept your tax dollars being spent on a Star Wars program that will never work. Write, sing, dance, burn flags, smoke marijuana, do whatever it takes to make your point.

Thirdly, think about the world

Abortion should be a doctor-patient decision

This letter is an opinion regarding the controversial issue of abortion which has been brought to our attention by the media recently. Ever since the new Bush/Quayle administration, many activists have been trying to overturn, or put many restrictions on, the famous Roe v. Wade court case of 1973.

If these activists are successful, one of two things will occur; either abortions will become illegal, or each state will decide for itself what restrictions to put on abortion. Making them illegal will not eliminate the need for, or prevent the practice of, abortions. Why should it be up to the state or government on what a woman should do with her body. In any other medical case there is at least some sort of doctor/patient confidentiality.

Why is it then that when it pertains to the abortion issue, there is no such thing? Everyone else becomes involved in a decision which does not directly concern them. If women have the right to choose contraceptives, or carry their child to full term, they should also be given the right to terminate their pregnancy.

An abortion is not an easy decision for a woman to make, but it should be her right to do so. America is thought of as "the land of the free," where everyone has the freedom of choice. Taking this choice away from women would be taking away their freedom. America would no longer be considered "the land of the free" but rather as "America, the controlled land."

Keene State has been recycling paper, cardboard, and posterboard. In the future, Caserta also hopes to get KSC to recycle non-aluminum cans as well. But the recycling efforts thus far, go far beyond the city's mandate, she said.

Glen Hipple, energy conservation and use coordinator, says without the efforts of ROCKS the recycling campaign wouldn't be half as successful as it is today. He attributes the success to Caserta, who is better known as "the recycling queen" among her friends.

Hipple and Robert Mallat, vice president of resource administration, realized how much time the organization of the recycling program involved and for that reason, Keene State now pays the recycling volunteers a small sum.

One problem the volunteers have discovered since the re-emergence of ROCKS is that students get all the heat for not recycling, but the faculty can be equally ignorant of the efforts. One example is beat-up aluminum cans in the faculty lounge.

Although, Caserta realizes there will always be opposition to her efforts and it will be impossible to get everyone to recycle on campus, she said any positive difference she can make is one more step forward.

One positive influence ROCKS has had is encouraging the Child Development Center (CDC) to recycle. By teaching everyone to recycle, including children, ROCKS is sending a beneficial reminder to children of the next generation to continue the recycling campaign.

Apparently Caserta and the efforts of ROCKS are working at Keene State, because membership and tion will need to make up a new set of guidelines for this scholarship fund, his guess is that the scholarship will be given on a yearly basis to one student per year.

The scholarship will be available to any Keene State student and will be awarded on a basis of need, Hoffman said. A KSCPA committee will make the final decision.

attempting to minimize the panic and the agony in the state," she added.

On Monday, Sturnick said the three college presidents will testify behind closed doors before the Senate Finance Committee.

"We think we have a better chance of being heard this way," Sturnick said.

If the 7.5 percent cut is approved, Sturnick assures students that the college will do everything it can to accommodate them. She said that momentum in the organization have increased dramatically. And as Caserta, Hipple, and Mallat all point out, "everyone can make a difference, especially if each person puts in their share of the work."

Through its scholarship program, the KSCPA has given close to $75,000 to students in the last 12 years, Colby said.

According to Hoffman, the KSCPA was established in 1973 in response to a need parents saw for students to have financial support in addition to other sources.

something will be worked out.

Sturnick said that by coming to Keene State, students were promised three things: improved academic quality, a decent environment, and an access to higher education.

"We will do everything we can to see that that door does not close," Sturnick said. "The problem is not here, the problem is in Concord."

Dreyfuss and Spielberg team-up for 'Always'

By Dave Meichsner and Louis Gendron Staff Writers

The latest Steven Spielberg film, "Always," stars Richard Dreyfuss (Stakeout), Holly Hunter (Broadcast News) and John Goodman (Rosanne) in an emotional film about a firefighter/pilot who dies while saving a friend's life.

The pilot, Pete (Dreyfuss) dies, but comes back in the form of a spirit to inspire a new pilot to take up where he left off. The task turns out to be more than he bargained for when his girlfriend Drinda (Hunter) becomes attracted to the pilot he is helping. Pete comes to realize that he must let her go in order for her to achieve happiness in her life.

The power to affect people's thoughts is given to Pete by an angel played by Audrey Hepburn. Pete must convince his friend Al (Goodman) to give the new pilot a chance at his training school.

In the end Pete realizes that he loves Drinda enough to let her go and have a happy life, after she puts his death behind her.

The film was definitely a classic Spielberg production. It contained a heavy orchestral soundtrack, strange lighting and, of course, many special effects. It comes close to being a tear-jerker at times, has very comical scenes and at other times comes dangerously close to being corny.

"Always" has a little bit of everything: action, humor, emotion and drama. If you are looking for an escape for a night, then this is a good movie for you.

Grant awarded to pay for KSC laser equipment

By Scott Miller Staff Writer

Jerry P. Jasinski, professor of chemistry, recently received an impressive science grant to pay for a laser instrument already in Keene State's possession.

The $150 thousand instrument will help improve lasers and materials made with lasers because it allows scientists to study laser materials in a solid state, according to Jasinski.

Since the laser instrument is the only one of its kind in New Hampshire, eight other schools will also use it including the University of New Hampshire and Dartmouth College. The laser instrument is the same as one currently in use at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said Jasinski.

Jasinski said Keene State is proud to have received this grant as its proposals competed with others throughout the nation.

Jasinski said that he "worked hard for the grant and it will be the students who will benefit."

Jasinski said his future plans related to this one include pursuing another grant for purchasing a laser which will let students and professors study biological materials and crystal structures. He will propose the grant at the Maryland Institute of Health in Bethesda, Md.

College from page 1

ment is divided into 12 chapters ranging from academic policy to athletic policy to advertising and publications. Presently Keene State is formulating the chapters for the self-study, according to Sturnick.

Each chapter of the study is divided into three parts. The first is a description which simply lists the types of services and activities that are offered in that particular facet of the college. The appraisal is the second section in which the college considers the effectiveness and efficiency of the policies. The projection allows the college to set goals for the future.

Once the chapter writing is complete, Sturnick indicated that the campus community will be able to offer input concerning the self-study. Following completion of the self-study, the document will be presented to the accreditation team. Members of this team are selected from other colleges which are members of the NEASC. They will review the self-study as well as visit the campus. The visit is scheduled for Nov. 4th through 7th.

The committee will then formulate a report based on the visit and the self-study. This report will be returned to Keene State so the college may correct any factual errors in the report, according to Jay Kahn, vice chairperson of the steering committee.

Following this, the accrediting group will make a recommendation to the executive board of the NEASC.

If the majority of the board votes in favor of reaccrediting the college, the school's status as an accredited college is renewed for another 10 years.

At the workshop in September, Sturnick said Keene State can not expect to breeze through the accreditation. During their last visit, Sturnick said, the accrediting team gave some harsh warnings to the school concerning several areas which needed immediate attention.

Sturnick said she feels this accreditation report will show some improvements. Budget problems will not strongly affect the chances for reaccrediting, but Sturnick said, "...they're (the accreditation team) going to say we need to put more money into the library, and they're probably going to suggest that we need more tenure-tracked permanent faculty positions and use fewer adjunct faculty."

Sturnick pointed out, however, that these types of problems are affecting all colleges in New England.

The president in charge of Keene State's accreditation team will be on campus in late April or early May to familiarize herself with the campus. A final decision on accreditation is expected from the NEASC sometime in March of 1991.

Professor returns from sabbatical in France

By Jennifer Layburn
Staff Writer

With over 4,000 new slides for coursework and other gathered material, Professor Carl Granquist—fresh from sabbatical in France—is ready to introduce his new sources to students.

Not only was Granquist able to gather information pertinent to his history classes, he also joined the bicentennial celebration of the French Revolution in Paris.

Originally Granquist was invited to France by the World Wide History Congress to attend a series of lectures. This prompted him to take advantage of the opportunity, Granquist said.

Being at Sorbonne University on the opening day of the series of lectures, and hearing President Francois Mitterand speak was one of the highlights of the semester, Granquist said. He was also able to meet the president at a reception after, Granquist added.

Another eventful experience was when the public was allowed to visit the Prime Minister's residence for the first time since World War II. These "various aspects" of history left an impact on Granquist, and he summed up his experience in one word—"fascinating."

Throughout Paris—from the Louvre Museum to the National Assembly—there was a "celebration of the celebration as "inappropriate," Granquist said.

A lot of people suffered during the revolution, Granquist said, and their ancestors don't forget. Granquist viewed posters that echoed these feelings. "Why are we celebrating? What's to celebrate?" they said. A majority of the French did celebrate, but there were still others who thought it was a "negative thing," Granquist said.

Granquist's special area of interest during his sabbatical was Louis XVI and his role as monarch during the pre-revolutionary years through the outbreak of war, and finally his execution.

Granquist collected so many books on the subject he had to ship them back separately, he said.

Granquist said the materials will of course have "educational value," especially for his French History of the 19th century course. He is "delighted I went" and thanks the college for the "opportunity to do this."

However, he said he doesn't "like the celebrity attraction."

achievements" for the 200th anniversary, Granquist said.

However, there was also a significant amount of people who viewed

Campus security legislation proposed

By Mark Nicholson
Staff Writer

Crime statistics on college campuses around the country have prompted Congress to propose an act which would require college and university security departments to disclose their policies and statistics, according to Bill H.R. 3344.

According to a memo sent to Keene State concerning the bill, H.R. 3344 is the "Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act of 1989." It is a result of concerns in Congress about increases in crime on college campuses during the past few years.

According to the memo, the annual National Campus Violence Survey showed "...that 80 percent of campus crimes are committed by a student upon another student and that 95 percent of the campus crimes which are violent are alcohol or drug related."

One part of Bill 3344 stresses the importance of access to security-related information for applicants wishing to enroll at a college or university. The memo states, "each eligible institution participating in any program under this title shall prepare, publish, and distribute, through appropriate publications and mailings, to all current students and employees and to any applicant for enrollment or employment, upon request, an annual report...." This report, according to the memo, would contain information regarding campus security policies and campus crime statistics.

Paul Bosquet, coordinator of security at Keene State, commented on the bill by saying, "you can't just paint a rosy picture." He added that to assume it is safer at Keene State than anywhere else would be unrealistic...crime "can happen and will happen."

Although the bill seems flawless on the surface, critics of the proposed legislation are worried that in some circumstances, disclosing information could cause problems.

Critics said publicizing certain crimes only leads to increases in those crimes and criminals will commit crimes for attention. They also said the privacy of victims might be forfeited if certain information was disclosed.

Bosquet disagreed by saying that publicizing does not make things worse. He added that publicizing crime is important because it lets people know what to expect.

"If they know, they have a choice to go in certain areas or not...this lessens chances of it (the crime) reoccurring," said Bosquet.

Bosquet expressed his personal approval of the bill and said if the bill is passed into law, it would help reduce crime on campuses across the country. If passed, the bill will go into effect July 1, 1990.

New director of alumni & parent relations named

Larry Colby, of Keene, N.H., has been named to the position of director of alumni and parent relations at Keene State College. Colby had served as interim director during the course of a one-year search to fill the position.

In his duties, Colby will assist the director of the Office of Alumni and Development at Keene State in functions involving the College's more than 15,000 alumni. Additionally, Colby will serve as liaison between the College and parents of KSC students, and the Keene State College Parents Association, a group of more than 350 parents dedicated to assisting Keene State students throughout their college education.

Prior to serving as interim director, Colby was business manager for the Keene State Arts Center on Brickyard Pond for five years. He also served as a school teacher at the elementary and junior high school level for four years.

Colby is a graduate of Keene State College. He earned a bachelor of elementary education degree in 1977, and a master of reading education degree in 1979. He serves on the Board of Directors for the Keene Children's Performing Arts Center; was a former PTA president; and served on the advisory board for Keene Summer Theater.

Director of IIC receives regional award

Merle Larracey, director of the Instructional Innovation Center at Keene State College, has been honored by The Northeast Region of Academic Affairs Administrators (AcAAd) for "Distinguished Service" to the organization. Larracey received the Marion Meyer Award at the 1989 Northeast AcAAd Annual Conference held in Providence, R.I.

AcAAd is a professional organization for persons responsible for the development, administration, and implementation of academic policies, programs, and services at institutions of higher education.

In 1984, The Northeast Region of Academic Affairs Administrators established the Marion Meyer Award in order to annually honor a member whose exemplary service, dedication, and commitment serves the organization in a superior way. Larracey began her service to AcAAd in 1978 and immediately agreed to represent New Hampshire as the state commissioner to the Executive Council. Her work continued as president-elect in 1983 and 1984, conference program co-chair 1984, and president from 1985 to 1988. During the presentation of the award, Larracey was cited for "Leadership which facilitated growth in membership and planning for three successful annual conferences."

At Keene State College, Larracey serves as director of a center to improve the teaching and learning environment of the institution. A member of the KSC staff since 1973, Larracey has been a member of the English Department faculty, as well as director of the college's Academic Advising Center and its Affirmative Action Officer.

Distinguished Teacher Award nominees sought

The Distinguished Teacher Award is presented annually by the KSC Alumni Association to recognize excellence in teaching at Keene State. The KSC Alumni Association has built a record of recognizing faculty for their contributions to the quality of the academic programs and the education of students. Excellence in teaching is based on the following criteria:

1. Excellence in classroom teaching.
2. Encourages independent thinking.
3. Rapport with students in and out of the classroom.
4. Positive attitude toward students and student advisement.

All nominees must be full-time tenure track faculty who have taught a minimum of three years at Keene State College and demonstrate continuing excellence in teaching. Previous recipients are not eligible for renomination.

Any member of the Keene State Community—full and part-time students, faculty, staff, recognized student organizations, and KSC alumni may submit a nomination accompanied by a complete nomination portfolio. Nomination portfolio guidelines are available from the President's Office.

All nominations, with completed portfolio, are due by 4:30 p.m., Monday, February 26, 1990 to:

WOMEN'S INCEST GROUP

11 weeks JUDITH MON. 1-2 or 3-4

This group is open to women who have experienced any kind of childhood sexual assault or sexual abuse by a family member. We will focus on the feelings and repercussions of being a survivor, on present family relationships and in getting support in the healing process.

WOMEN SURVIVORS OF SEXUAL ABUSE

11 weeks JEAN/EMILY THURS. 1-2

This group is open to women who are survivors of childhood and/or adult sexual abuse. The support that survivors can offer each other in this type of group is integral to the healing process.

WOMEN'S THERAPY

9 weeks SALLY TUES. 1-2

This group will provide an opportunity for people to explore their behavior and feelings in relation to family and friends. Our goal will be personal growth, self-awareness and increased interpersonal effectiveness.

Fraternity must admit women

(CPS) — Middlebury College's six fraternities must begin admitting women members by 1991 or shut down, the Vermont school's trustees voted Jan. 13.

The board stopped short of a special task force recommendation to abolish all fraternities on the Middlebury campus by May 30, a fate that has stricken houses at several other schools recently, including Colby, Amherst, Gettysburg and Castleton State colleges.

In November, faculty at Bucknell University in Pennsylvania recommended abolishing its 13 fraternities and 10 sororities because they are "racist, sexist and anti-intellectual."

At Middlebury, two of the houses, Sigma Epsilon and Kappa Delta Rho, already recruit women. Delta Upsi-on and Delta Kappa Epsilon members have said they'll abide by the rules, but Chi Psi and Zeta Psi have vowed to fight the order, said Middlebury spokesman Ron Nief.

The frats must tell Middlebury by March if they'll follow the order. If the answer is no, college officials will shut the house down, and it will be used for student residences, Nief said.

"It's unfortunate," said Jonathon Brant, executive director of the National Interfraternity Council. "It's inconsistent coming from a college with a liberal arts tradition."

Fraternities came under scrutiny after Vermont's drinking age was raised to 21 two years ago, Nief said, and the houses became hot spots.

"Social life at Middlebury College was being dominated by institutions that were already gender restrictive," Nief said. "Sexism was a constant complaint. Women didn't feel comfortable there, and sometimes they didn't feel safe there."

Middlebury has no sororities.

Interim Student Government Association President Louise Totten said the decision reflects an overwhelming vote last year calling for retention of a reformed fraternity system.

"Some fraternity members will be very disappointed with the potential necessity of severing ties with their national organizations, while some students will be disappointed by the maintenance of the fraternity system even with reforms."

Purdue plagued by phony sex researcher

(CPS) — A phony researcher who purports to be a Purdue University researcher has been calling Indiana residents to ask about their sexual behavior.

Last term, officials at Baylor University in Texas and Ohio State University also reported that someone was making a rash of obscene phone calls to students.

At Purdue, officials say the phone calls have been going on since 1986. The most recent call was reported to police the first week of January. In all cases, the caller identifies himself as a Purdue researcher and says he's studying sexual behavior, Purdue spokesman Charles Leslie related. Those contacted live in another part of the state, Leslie said, and none of the victims have been students.

Jeff Philbrick hobbles to class. "I gotta go to class 20 minutes ahead of time to beat the rush," Philbrick said.

U.S. governors blasted for breaking promises

(CPS) — Student lobbyists and campus administrators have almost uniformly blasted state governors' January proposals for how much they want to spend on public campuses during next school year as lean, mean and laden with funding "gimmicks" that won't help cash-starved schools.

They say their governors' budget proposals, unveiled in most state capitols during the last three weeks of January, almost always broke promises made in 1989 to give more money to colleges.

"In the world of politics, higher education funding is called a high priority, but it's just a lot of rhetoric," said John Leyman, student government president at the University of California at Riverside, after reviewing Gov. George Deukmejian's Jan. 11 state campus spending proposals.

Added Julius Davis of the U.S. Student Association (USSA) in Washington, D.C., "It looks good when politicians say they want to see education get funding, but what that means to most of them is to maintain it at the same level."

While it's too early to compute whether state funding of colleges will rise or fall for the 1990-91 fiscal year, which stretches from July 1, 1990, through June 30, 1991, only one state — Virginia — so far is considering cutting its higher education funds.

Outgoing Gov. Gerald Baliles proposed cutting higher ed funding by 5 percent, and making up the difference by increasing out-of-state students' tuition by 5 percent.

State Sen. Dudley Emick warned more cuts could come when legislators debate the proposal during the next few months: "Higher education is a place where some major paring could be done without harm to the institutions."

More typically, the state budget proposals tended to include increases that, after inflation is figured in, turn out to be ephemeral.

"I think the commitment to education is a lot of rhetoric," complained University of Utah student Jay Helton after reading Gov. Norman Bangert's Jan. 11 higher education proposal. "Nobody is putting their money where their mouth is."

Bangert offered Utah's colleges almost $400 million a 7 percent increase over last year. After accounting for rising costs, however, the additional $29 million amounts to about 2 percent increase in real dollars.

In New York, Gov. Mario Cuomo offered state colleges almost $900 million less than what they had asked for, and then ordered them not to raise tuition to make up the difference.

"I think they can do it without (raising tuition) this year," Cuomo said.

In general, what colleges don't get from legislatures, they have to get from their other major source of funds: students and the tuition students pay.

Virtually all the budget proposals submitted during January presumed campuses would raise student's tuition rates for next school year.

In California, for example, Deukmejian suggested the 13-campus California State University system, the nine-campus University of California campus and the 105-campus community college system make up the difference between what they need and what he offered them by raising students' fees by almost 5 percent.

Cal-Riverside's Leyman warned fees could rise 15-to-25 percent if voters in June reject a state constitutional amendment to let colleges join primary and secondary schools in sharing any surplus state funds.

Yet legislators really are concerned about students' pocketbooks, maintained John Meyers, education program director for the National Conference on State Legislatures (NCSL), which tracks state capitol activities.

Why have snow piles?

More than 15 inches of snow have fallen on Keene State College in the past week and a half. Along with this snow has come the problem of removal.

Part of that solution is the piling of snow into two large snowbanks on Appian Way. These have been placed on Appian Way for a reason however.

In the next few years Appian Way will be torn up and replaced with a green similar to the one at Dartmouth. Private donations are currently being solicited for this project.

The piles are meant to represent clusters of trees and benches, according to President Judith Stur-nick.

She said Bob Mallat, vice president for resource administration, wanted to study how traffic patterns would be affected by the elimination of certain walkways. Mallat is in charge of the Appian Way beautification project.

The piles will be removed shortly, however, Stur-nick said.

RECYCLING AT KEENE STATE COLLEGE

HERE ARE THE FACTS:

During the first semester the College community has--

- >>Collected and sold more than a ton of white paper, worth about $85.
- >>Collected and sold over 90,000 aluminum cans, worth about $1,170.
- >>Collected seven tons of glass, two tons of newspaper, and thousands of pounds of plastic bottles and cardboard.
- >>Recycled over 200 cubic yards of material, saving over $2,400 in escalating landfill charges that would have eventually been passed on to students.

"IT'S YOUR FUTURE TOO"

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN PARTICIPATE:

Just follow these easy steps--

- >>Be conscious. When you are finished with something -- soda can, EQUINOX, page of notes, or whatever -- hold on to it until you can deposit it in one of the recycling containers located in every campus building.
- >>Make a collection box in your dorm room or office to store recyclable materials until they can be deposited in KSC recycling containers.
- >>Put each recyclable in its designated container; do not mix types of material. Put garbage only in regular waste containers.
- >>Support other people who recycle their trash. Encourage those who do not yet recycle to join and participate.
- >>Reduce your own waste. For example, carry home purchases in your knapsack or tote bag. The less there is to begin with, the less that must be sorted and recycled.

Hard work from the swim team pays dividends

By Kristi Severson
Staff Writer

In Saturday's tri-meet against Norwich University and Middlebury College, Keene State's swimming and diving team took a close second to Middlebury's first.

Despite the disadvantage of competing against a large team such as Middlebury, the teams performance was "excellent. We lacked numbers but the quality was there. We had many close races," captain Tanya Horne said.

Swimmers Jen Bento, Mary Setchell, Paula Dodge, and Leigh Cassidy combined efforts to place third in the 200 yard medley relay. Both Tanya Horne and Derek DeCoste captured firsts in the 1,000 and 500 yard freestyle. DeCoste also took second in the 200 yard individual medley.

Another first place was earned in the 400 yard freestyle relay through the unified swimming skills of Amy Reis, Kim Larkin, Dana Martin, and Paula Dodge. Other individuals who placed first were Jen Bento, Mary Setchell, Amy Reis and Alex MacLeod for their diving.

In the meet on Saturday, January 20, against Central Connecticut's Division I team, Keene State showed no mercy.

First place winners were Chris Campbell and Mary Setchell in the 100 yard breast stroke, Jen Bento in the 200 yard freestyle, and Tanya Horne in the 500 yard freestyle.

Divers Amy Reis and Kim Larkin earned first and third while the men's team placed second on the one-meter board and first-year diver, Shane Nickerson, also placed second on the three-meter board.

On January 19, the team placed second against Salem State. The meet started impressively as Mike Newman, Chris Campbell, Peter Crowell and Derek DeCoste worked together to win first place in the 200 yard medley relay. Tripp Hutchinson was also victorious in earning a first in the 1,000 yard freestyle. Other firsts were earned by Derek DeCoste, Jen Bento, and Tanya Horne.

Diver Matt Gaudio executed a difficult forward 2 1/2 sommersault dive off the one meter board to capture third place.

Keene State's swimming and diving coach Dave Mason always encourages the team to challenge themselves, diver Kim Larkin said. This challenge has brought rewards to divers Alex MacLeod and Matt Gaudio, and swimmers Jen Bento, Leigh Cassidy, Tanya Horne, and Derek DeCoste as they have qualified to compete in the New England. "It is indicative of the team to continue its fine tradition of qualifying for post-season," Assistant Athletic Director Mary Conway said.

The swim team travels to Plymouth State College this Friday, February 2, for their next competition.

Lacrosse coach expects good things this season

By John Shore
Staff Writer

Club lacrosse doesn't begin its season until mid March, but coach Jim Draper already has his team pounding the pavement.

Draper said his team will have to be in "phenomenal shape" this season because this is the first year that they will be competing in the Pilgrim League.

The Pilgrim League is a club league which consists of teams from colleges such as Boston University, Bentley and Bryant colleges.

Draper said that he expects to have a strong team this year. The team lost only three players from last year and 40 people came to the first meeting. 1990 marks the fourth year that Draper has coached the team. Draper works as a purchasing agent for Keene State full time and he is a volunteer coach for the team.

The team has shown great improvement since Draper began coaching three years ago. In their first season they played five games and went 1-4. In their second season they played ten games and went 6-4. Last year the team played six games and ended the season undefeated.

"This year will tell us where we belong," Draper said. He is very happy with the team's previous record but he wants to do well against this year's tougher teams.

When asked his prediction for the upcoming season Draper replied, "I think we're gonna surprise a lot of people."

Gonyea joins 1,000 point club

The women's basketball team goes 2-0 on the week

By Joe Wyman
Staff Writer

The Keene State Lady Owls had a big day last Saturday against the University of Bridgeport Purple Knights. The Owls defeated the Purple Knights by 18 points, saw a second player from this year's team reach the 1,000-point career scoring mark, and discovered that their defense is the key to success.

The first 19 minutes of the first half saw some exciting basketball offensively for both teams. Both teams shot in the fifty percentile for the half. It was a "run and gun" showdown with outside jumpers and inside post moves being executed at will. Unfortunately, offense alone cannot win games.

"Offensively we executed pretty well," said coach Keith Boucher. "But they shot 56 percent which meant that we weren't getting at it defensively."

With the Owls trailing by five points throughout the majority of the first half, they cut it to one in the remaining minute to find themselves trailing 40-39 at the half.

The second half would see the Owls pull ahead for good.

"Bridgeport had been killing people off the boards," Boucher said. "But we out-rebounded them for the game 39-31 and that was a big key for us."

The Owls not only picked up their rebounding but also their defense which forced the Purple Knights to lose the ball on six shot clock expirations.

"Our defense keys our offense," Boucher said. "Our defense was just outstanding. It gave us the opportunity to get out and run. Everybody contributed and just did a great job for us."

"We showed the composure we have to show. We need to win every game and I think we are bringing our play up to the next level. The loss to New Hampshire College taught us that we have to come out and play as hard as we can."

Keene's offense was truly the big story of the day. Four players finished in double figures. Renee Bernier led the offensive attack by nailing outside jumpers and some shake-and-bake inside moves for a total of 27 points. Laura Bennett had a strong inside game with 20 points, as did Michelle Ziegler who finished with ten.

Tina Gonyea, the Owls' senior point guard, needed 14 points to reach the 1,000 point career scoring mark and she did it by netting 15. Gonyea started the season at 787 and is now the sixth women's basketball player in the history of Keene State to score 1,000 points or more in their career.

The all-time scoring record for women's basketball is also on the verge of being broken by senior Renee Bernier who needs only 45 more points to be the college's all-time leading scorer for women.

KSC fans can see Bernier strive for that goal and the rest of the Lady Owls in action tonight against the University of Lowell women's team which is one game behind the Owls in the NECC standings. The Owls are now in second place, one game behind New Hampshire College.

Poor weather conditions slow down the ski team

By Dave McAlpine
Staff Writer

Last weekend the Keene State College ski team skied at Lake Placid, New York and was plagued with bad weather. Because it rained last weekend before the event, the Olympic racing trail was very icy and had a difficult pitch that caused many racers to fall. "Conditions were so poor that it was difficult to get any good times," said KSC ski team coach Bud Burgess.

The winner of the event was the University of Vermont team that finished first in both the men's and women's slalom topping Dartmouth by 23 points and Middlebury by seven.

Daryl Tyler finished 30th and Kim Shay also finished 30th for Keene State. Burgess said that the team's two most experienced skiers are Amy Cantin and Nick Morse and said that the rest of the team is relatively new to the division one circle. He went on to say that Daryl Tyler is progressing and in the winter seasons ahead he will become a major point scorer.

The coach said he expects Nick Morse and Amy Cantin to be skiing at their full potential this weekend when the University of Vermont hosts the next ski meet at Stowe Vt.

Owl freshmen produce career-high numbers

By Tonya Dalhaus
Photography Editor

The men's basketball team played a strong, even tempo game Saturday despite their 71-60 loss to the University of Bridgeport, according to assistant coach Matt Capeless.

Capeless was hardly disappointed with the Owls performance against Bridgeport, which ranked second in the New England Collegiate Conference last year. Capeless considers Bridgeport to be one of the most talented teams.

Leading the Owls with 18 points was sophomore Steve Pollard.

Two first year players also had personal success. Freshman Nelson Peterson, a leading high school basketball player in Connecticut in 1989 reached a career and game high of nine rebounds. Scoring 13 points was freshman Derrick Aiken who played a good all-around game according to assistant coach Mark Nagy.

Wednesday's game against Franklin Pierce was brought to a halt with less than 17 minutes remaining, when puddles formed on the Franklin Pierce gym floor. The condensation led to the referees decision to resume the game at a later date. The cancellation left a disappointed Franklin Pierce team that was leading the game 49-32. "They had players making shots that don't normally shoot and I think the cancellation puts us at an advantage," said Capeless.

The Owls record is now 5-13. They look to improve their record in tonight's game against the University of Lowell.

Athletes of the week

Chosen by Sports Info.

This week three athletes were chosen for the athlete of the week; swimmers Derek Decoste and Tanya Horne, and women's basketball player Tina Gonyea.

Both swimmers have already qualified for the New England, which will be held this year at the University of Rhode Island.

During the week, the men were helped by DeCoste's winning the individual medley with a time of 2:12.30. He also won the 100-yd.

breast stroke with a time of 1:07.40. For the women, Horne won the 500-yd. freestyle in 5:44.68, and also the 1000-yd. freestyle in 11:40.04.

In women's basketball, the team went undefeated due to Gonyea's exceptional play. Last week she averaged 13.5 points and 7.5 assists in the two games. To add to her exceptional week Gonyea scored her 1,000 point. She is only the sixth woman in Keene State history to reach this goal.

KSC judo: A club sport for everyone

By Jason Cheek
Sports Editor

There are many club sports here at KSC, and the Judo team is a popular choice among students. The team meets every Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday nights at 7, in the KSC gym. Students of all different abilities attend, and the club is always looking for new members. Members learn the basics of Judo for sport purposes as well as for self defense.

Member Steve Kusnarowis likes the club particularly because of the atmosphere. He feels that everyone is able to work out at their own pace so that progression is always steady.

The Judo club participated in a local competition last Saturday at the local YMCA. This was not a trophy event, but the athletes were able to compete in regulation competitions against athletes from different areas.

A KSC judo club member competes at a local YMCA sponsored tournament last Saturday.

CONCORD, N.H.—Students from the University System of New Hampshire's four schools gathered on the steps of the state house yesterday to protest a proposed 7.5 percent cut in funding.

Amid signs proclaiming "Why pay more for less" and chants of "Read my lips: No new cuts," approximately 500 students held what they called a pro-education rally.

Twenty-seven Keene State students made the bus trip to Concord, with approximately a dozen more students driving on their own.

Student leaders from KSC, Plymouth State, the University of New Hampshire and the New Hampshire Technical Institute, as well as several members of the New Hampshire Legislature spoke at the hour-long rally.

The rally concluded with the crowd marching to the United States Court House, where legislative hearings concerning the budget were taking place.

Students slowed traffic as they marched one-and-a-half blocks to the court house and waved signs at oncoming traffic. Many motorists beeped their horns in support of the students.

Sen. William Bartlett spoke to the crowd and said the legislature does not want to make cuts in higher education, but every state agency must face the budget axe.

"We have a large spectrum of citizens to take care of," Bartlett said. "It's much easier for us to tell you everything is fine, when it isn't," Bartlett said.

Bartlett added that, despite USNH official's warnings that a demonstration might harm the budget process, he does not believe this is the case.

"There are some people in the New Hampshire Legislature who understand what you are doing," he said. "And we are proud of you."

House Minority Leader Mary Chambers urged the crowd to remember the budget cuts when it comes time to vote in November.

"The democrats in the house are not going to balance a budget on the backs of the students," she said.

Representative Elizabeth Hagar said the rally is an important part of the budget process.

"It's important for your representatives to understand how much your education means to you," she said.

Keene State Student Assembly Treasurer Carlene Flibotte spoke to the crowd about the importance of higher education to the future of the state.

"Education needs to be important," Flibotte said. "It's our future and our children's future." Her remarks drew loud applause from the crowd, as did most of the speaker's.

Keene State Student Body President Erik Oparowski, Student Trustee Bill Lessard and Student Assembly Chairperson Monique B.I. Goldberg were present at the rally but did not speak.

Lessard and Flibotte, along with 10 other student leaders, met with Bartlett early yesterday to discuss their concerns.

Lessard said Bartlett told the students at "face value" what the current budget situation is.

"A lot of administrators could give ainker's damn about students," said Dr. Richard J. Del Guidice about most of the administrators he's dealt with in the past.

Del Guidice, the third candidate for the vice president of academic affairs position, was on campus Monday, Feb. 5 for interviews with the Keene State community. He said, "the administration here seems to have the benefit of the students as their main interest."

Del Guidice is currently the dean for the school of liberal studies at the State University of New York at Potsdam (SUNY-Potsdam). SUNY-Potsdam is a liberal, co-educational facility with 4,000 undergraduate students.

"I am very impressed with the sense of unity at Keene State and the degree to which everyone seems to think the president is the best thing to happen to the state of New Hampshire," he said.

Del Guidice said differences between faculty and administration and the lack of suspicion between faculty members. He said he noticed the positive environment at Keene State even though people realize there will not be enough money to significantly
